ABOUT AUTHOR

My name is Caleb Wu, and I am a student completing the IB (International Baccalaureate) MYP (Middle Years Programme) Personal Project. This book is the outcome of my independent research on parenting styles and their influence on teen development. I chose this topic due to the current situations of modern family dynamics, with advancing technology, how parents were raised in the past, misunderstanding, lack of communication, etc. Throughout this project, I had secondary research and analysed primary research that I conducted via survey from both parents and teenagers to better understand differing perspectives within the parent-child relationship. And by completing this project, it allowed me to strengthen my research, analytical, and reflective skills, while also deepening my understanding of how social and familial factors shape teen experiences.
